present manager DON HOWE

CHARLIE is beginning to show why we invested £750,000 in him. He's showing all the class and ability we always knew he had — and he's scoring goals.

He's playing very, very well at the moment and he's going to get even better.

Personally I feel he's a more effective player behind the forwards because he's got the freedom to play anywhere he wants instead of being restricted to one area of the pitch.

Like all great players, Charlie wants to work and wants to be involved all the

His passing skills are tremendous both long and short balls — and his run-ning off the ball is great. He's a tremendous dribbler and has a great eye for an opening.

In fact, he's got the lot.

He didn't get me the sack TERRY NEILL former Arsenal boss

DEOPLE said that Charlie's failure to score a hatful of goals for Arsenal score a nature of goals for Arsenar contributed to my sacking last season, but that's very unfair on the lad. He was a commercial success before he'd even kicked a ball for the club and his name sold a lot of season tickets because a club like Arsenal needs a big-name signing every couple of years.

I never had any doubt that Charlie would prove his worth on the pitch, and that's exactly what he is now

ATURAL ability is something you never lose, and I never doubted that Charlie had that ability.

Luck wasn't on his side last season, but things seem to be running better for him this term and from what I've seen of him he's playing very well.

I'm delighted for Charlie, because he's such a skilful player and a delight to watch when he's on the ball. He's also scoring some spectacular goals.

He was criticised last season for being involved in too many commercial deals, but now he has a friend looking after his interests instead of an agent and this will help take the pressure off him.

And from Scotland's point of view, it's obviously tremendous to see the wee man getting back to his true form. I'd love to see him improve beyond all recognition — as long as it's not against Liverpool!

Kept smiling

His Arsenal team-mate GRAHAM RIX

T'S no surprise to me that Charlie has come good because I never for one moment doubted his ability to succeed in English football.

In fact, he's been playing well ever since the boss moved him into midfield at the start of the year. But it's only since we've been at the top of the League that people have started to give him the credit he deserves.

He was under a lot of pressure last season, but he always tried to keep smiling and never let it get him down.

He's a smashing lad to have in the dressing-room and now that the goals are flowing I can sense that little extra confidence in his play.

Through training and playing with Charlie every day, I know just how good he is and I'm certain we're going to hear a lot more from him and from Arsenal in the coming years.

Our congratulations to David Hegarty, our first Fan of the Week. David is seen here with Graham Rix.

ONE PLAYER stood between West Bromwich Albion and a walloping when the First Division club took on new-boys Sheffield Wednesday at The Hawthorns.

Goalkeeper Tony Godden turned in a superlative performance to keep out the rampant Wednesday attack which was led superbly by Imre Varadi.

Varadi scored a breathtaking solo goal but Albion managed to hang on for a lucky draw.

Hardly a person in the ground would deny that Godden was Albion's most impressive performer, yet the 29-year-old goalkeeper had good reason to believe that his career was finished last season.

Godden, who has made more than 250 appearances for Albion, spent 17 miserable months in the reserves as Paul Barron, the former Crystal Palace 'keeper, enjoyed an uninterrupted first DAVID HODGSON left the club he respects more than any other to join one he supported as a schoolboy. And the move still finds him with mixed feelings.

He says: "I consider Liverpool the best club in the land and it was a blow to know I'd missed out on the chance to win a regular first team place.

But in coming to Sunderland, I've returned to the club I thought so much of as a kid. I was such a Roker fan that I even sold bingo tickets there.

'I had wanted so much to make it at Liverpool that it hurt. But after two and a half years at Anfield the prospect of another season of reserve team football made me realise the time had come to make a fresh start elsewhere.

In fact the former Middlesbrough striker asked Liverpool for a transfer more than a year ago. Dave says: "I was missing Teesside so much that I asked for a move and was disappointed when Liverpool turned down opening negotiations by Sunderland.

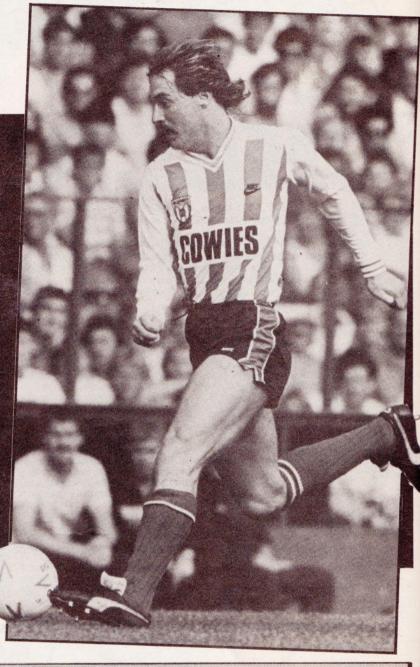

But Liverpool's refusal to sell Hodgson in 1983 was a turning point for him. He says: "I made up my mind to have a real go at establishing myself at Anfield.

"I began to make friends on Merseyside, and was coming to terms with life in the area."

But when Dave's bid for first team recognition failed, he opted for pastures new.

I'm delighted to be given this opportunity at Sunderland. I've returned to the North-East a better player than when I left and intend to prove it.

IRMINGHAM CITY were not given a price this season when manager Ron Saunders jettisoned half his team following their relegation from the First Division

Out went Noel Blake, the powerhouse defender spoken of as an England possible, Howard Gayle, Mark McCarrick, Pat van den Hauwe and goalkeeper Tony Coton.

Birmingham's shortage of money, despite a £300,000 profit from the sale of Coton to Watford, appeared to give Saunders little hope of building a side good enough to regain a foothold in the First Division at the first attempt.

But once more Saunders looks as if he will shake those who label him a 'toughie" boss with a code of discipline capable of making a French Foreign Legionnaire wince.

Birmingham's charge into a promotion chasing position is a tribute to Saunders' soccer brain not muscles.

It is the same brain that guided Norwich to the Second Division Championship in 1972 and the League Cup Final in 1973; Manchester City to the League Cup Final in 1974; Aston Villa to League Cup triumph in 1975 and 1977, and the First Division title in 1981.

It is about time people realised that Ron Saunders is one of the best managers in Britain.

Don't jeer...

Y MANCHESTER UNITED team-mate Alan Brazil has taken such a barrage of unfair criticism that I feel it necessary to jump to his defence.

I am doubly anxious to offer him my support this week because Alan, and the rest of us, are in full training for Saturday's top of the table clash at Old Trafford against Spurs, his former club.

clash at Old Trafford against Spurs, his former club.

While Jesper Olsen and Gordon Strachan have been allowed to settle happily into their new lives at United, Alan Brazil has been slaughtered by the Press and fans.

I've always believed in the saying that if you can't say something nice about someone, don't say anything at all. So, it's about time somebody stood up for Alan.

First, it is necessary to study the circumstances of his transfer. Unlike Olsen and Strachan, Alan had a miserable time at his previous club. He played fewer than 20 League games for Spurs last season, scoring just three goals, one of those against Manchester United with a flying overhead kick.

So he came to Manchester United with his confidence low and his appetite for the game suffering a bit.

I must admit that I began to wonder whether Alan was as good as he was cracked up to be at Ipswich, his first club. I had my doubts about his strength, that quality so essential to compete in the First Division.

Let me assure you that Alan has erased those doubts, even though he is a bit of a ball-watcher, forgetting to tackle back.

He has pace and is much stronger than I thought he was. He makes tremendous runs and with more match practice than the handful of games he has had so far,

should be pushing for a Scotland place

Nothing gave me, or Alan, greater pleasure than to see him score his first goal for United, a vital effort in our UEFA Cup second-leg tie in Hungary against Vasas Gyor.

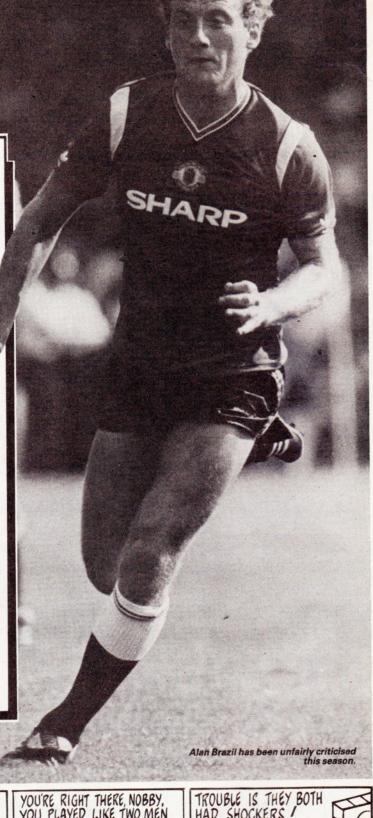

Alan Brazil's problems are typical of those that often beset strikers. Just take the case of Garth Crooks, Alan's old pal at White Hart Lane, who could well be leading the Spurs attack against us.

You'll remember that Garth made a You'il remember that Garth made a handful of appearances for United on loan last season. Like Brazil, he had lost confidence, form and his place at Spurs and United were interested in taking him. It didn't work out, and I wouldn't mind betting that Garth is happy he returned to London now that he has recaptured the marksmanship that first impressed me when I played against him in his Stoke

Uniteds and Liverpools," McMenemy admits. "But that's one of the reasons why I enjoy being with Southampton. It's a challenge, and when you tweak the tails of the big boys it means so much more.

The gap between the traditional big-city clubs and the rest is becoming increasingly wide. "The point was emphasised by the big-money signings that Manchester United, Tottenham and Liverpool made during the summer.

There isn't a manager in the First Division who wouldn't give his right arm for some of the stars they bought. But most of us couldn't afford their wages, let alone the transfer fees!

'And it doesn't help clubs like Southampton when their own players attempt to break their contracts in the way Mark Wright did earlier this season, or Mo Johnston did at Watford.

'Prepared'

"Watford's attitude was summed up by chairman Elton John's comment that he would be prepared to let Johnston 'rot in the reserves' rather than bow to a transfer request made through the newspapers.

'And that is precisely what I told Mark Wright.

'In fact, I would have been prepared to put Mark in Southampton's "A" team. "There is no way I would let a big club take advantage of all the work we have done in developing Mark.

It is very important that clubs have directors with this attitude, not just the managers. Both Watford and Southampton boards would rather have let the players disappear in reserve team football than be sold under those circumstances.

Thankfully both situations have been resolved but the incidents just showed what kind of pressure the small town clubs are under.

'I've been fortunate at Southampton in having a good board of directors. A lot of managers whose teams have bad starts to the season would be worrying about their jobs.

But our directors appreciate the problems of being in charge of a club with limited resources.

hose who believe that First Division respectability is the ultimate ambition for small-town clubs should have seen the dejected figure of Lawrie McMenemy at Highbury last April.

He had just seen his Southampton side beaten in the last moments of their F.A. Cup Semi-Final with Everton by Adrian Heath's extra-time winner.

So how can a manager of a club with limited financial resources and an average home gate of less than 20,000 sustain a serious challenge to the giants of Old Trafford, Anfield, Highbury, Goodison Park and White Hart Lane?

'You've got to produce your own players," McMenemy explains, pointing out that Southampton first team players like Nick Holmes, Steve Williams, Steve Moran and Danny Wallace all graduated through the club's youth system.

'And you can't afford to make mistakes in the transfer market your judgment has got to be spot on.

"It's becoming harder and harder to compete with the Manchester

ALLSISSISSIS

STEVE WILLIAMS (Southampton)

STEVE Williams, Southampton's England midfield player, believes his temperament was his biggest enemy until Lawrie McMenemy hauled him over the coals.

"I was hot-headed early in my career," said Williams, "and it was threatening to spoil my progress.

"But when I was sent-off at Blackburn Rovers for a stupid tackle the boss made it clear he'd had enough. He gave me a right rollicking.

"He told me that I had to make up my mind about my future and that unless I calmed down and concentrated on football I'd get nowhere.

"I've had a lot of help and good advice at The Dell, but that dressing down hit home."

GRAEME SOUNESS (Sampdoria)

GRAEME Souness recalls the turning point in his career — a verbal roasting from Jack Charlton.

Souness, now playing for Sampdoria in Italy, said: "I thought I was the bee's knees during my early days with Middlesbrough, so I guess big Jack reckoned it was time to put me straight

"Jack is a powerful persuader when he's angry and he really hammered home the point that I had lots to learn, that I needed to lose the spare tyre round my middle, that it was about time I shut up and listened and grafted.

"Deep down I knew he was right."

GRAHAM RIX (Arsenal)

GRAHAM Rix's return to form in the Arsenal midfield had as much to do with a dressing down from manager Don Howe as it did his undoubted ability.

The England man explained: "I was simply not playing as well as I could. Maybe being captain was part of the problem, but that could sound like an excuse.

"Don asked to see me and let me know in no uncertain terms that the time had come for me to make up my mind about my career.

"By the time Don had finished with me I was bristling and it seemed as if someone had swep away a mountain of cobwebs and lead weights off my mind."

Norman, of course, is well remembered for his fierce tackling in the colours of Leeds United and England.

BRIGHTON defender Gary O'Reilly always looks twice at Terry Gibson, now at Coventry.

"When we were both at Spurs the players attended a reception at a country club," explains Gibson. "Gary was one of the last to "Gary was one of the last to arrive and was amazed when he spotted me.

"I've just seen you leave," insisted Gary. I dashed outside and found my car had been nicked.

"Gary had only opened the gate, waved the thieves goodbye and then complained that I had ignored him!"

Andy's laugh-in

(taken from The Scottish Football Annual published by Stanley Paul £4.95)

Scottish comedian Andy Cameron is a firm Rangers fan. He's a season-ticket holder at Ibrox and rarely misses a game... or the chance to have a laugh at the club's expense.

"When Rangers won the League Cup, someone asked where the trophy room was. Big Jock Wallace got the key, opened the door and Shergar jumped out. That wasn't all. Lord Lucan was riding him."

BEHIND great players there's the shadow of a boot hovering in the background to remind them that they all felt its toe at decisive stages in their careers.

Here we look at five top players and discover the occasions when each received the shake-up that set him on the road to greatness.

RYAN Robson, England's dynamic captain and the hub of Manchester United's Championship drive, is the last person in football you'd expect to be accused of posing ... but that's exactly what manager Ron Atkinson once told him!

Atkinson, then Robson's boss at West Bromwich Albion, watched the gifted young player closely during a number of games before pouncing.

"I pulled him to one side and told him that he had it in him to become one of the best players in the world. But the sting in the tail was that he had to stop posing and start doing the business. "I saw the wonderful talent in him and wanted to bring it all out.

Bryan is very proud and he responded as I expected — by becoming one of the best players in the world!"

THERE'S no questioning Mike Fillery's skill and vision, but more than one manager has tackled the midfield player about his lazy, casual style.

It was QPR boss Alan Mullery who finally brought things to a head ... and it seems to have worked this season.

"We were playing at home and doing well," said Mullery:

"but when the lads came in at half-time I refused to allow Mike to sit down. I was afraid he might doze off!

"I've heard of being laid back, but he can be positively laid out!

"Mike is a fine player with lots to offer but I will keep pushing him until he gets the message. Now he's playing an important role in our development."

SOCCER SLIP ... from TV commentator John Motson: "For the benefit of viewers watching in black and white, Spurs are in the yellow shirts."

We're soaring with Big Jack

NEWCASTLE'S excellent start to the season may have surprised people outside Geordieland ... but it's absolutely

Few folk realise just how worried the players and fans were during the summer as Kevin Keegan retired and manager Arthur Cox packed his bags.

Suddenly we were a First Division team, preparing to compete in the toughest division in the world without the two men who had done most to get us there.

Spirits soared when Jack Charlton came 'home' to take the reins, and although he actually changed our playing style, he gave us confidence and relates easily to the fans. Hardly surprising — he's one of them!

So we've caught people with their shorts down — those who watched us playing the ball to feet through midfield last season have been stretched beyond tolerance by the swift long balls that Peter Beardsley and I hare on to.

Inexperienced

Can we keep it going? Well we know we're always going to concede goals because we are a young side, inexperienced at this level and dedicated to scoring more than our opponents rather than conceding less.

Makes nonsense of the pre-season predictions that the boss would turn us into a defensive side, difficult to break down!

Yes, we have to tighten up at the back, work harder in midfield and do more defending from the front. We also need to slow things down. We set out at 100 miles per hour then tire towards

But we attack, we excite, we entertain and we fear nobody. Once we settle down and gain more experience we will become a force in the land.

KEVIN CARR: "Mr Newcastle" is one of the busier 'keepers in the First Division, so I'm amazed that he finds so much time to dedicate to functions off the field. No matter what's going on in the area, "Carrsie" attends, making presentations, snipping ribbons and probably kissing babies!

MAL BROWN: Great to see him playing again after missing a whole season with an ankle injury. Mal is a quiet lad, quick, tenacious and just as busy these days as the rest of the back four.

JOHN ANDERSON: "Ando" is an unpredictable
Dubliner with a crazy line in practical jokes and evil tricks, his favourite being the extraction of hairs from your unsuspecting legs with a pair of tweezers! Try relaxing before a game with him near you.

GLENN ROEDER: We are beginning to understand what he says now, though it was hard going for a while. The only Cockney in the side, he takes endless stick and has the personality to cope. A quality player with good skills and a natural leader.

WES SAUNDERS: Cheerfully known as "Mental" because of his unfortunate habit of damaging himself while attempting daft pranks. Memorable items include failed handstands on slippery bath-side tiles. A real joker and a damn good

KENNY WHARTON: Mr Universe will always have to suffer under the nickname of "Bonesy" because of his strapping eight-and-a-bit-stor frame. He is a typical Geordie, fanatical about DAVID McCREERY: For reasons I've never understood he is always known as "Dobbler". Dave has experience, a cool head and has played with and against the very best. He's a winner and a typical Irishman, full of quips and great to have around when you are up against it.

PAT HEARD: Just getting to know our new arrival from Sheffield Wednesday. He's obviously a fine player – in fact the boss has just signed him for the second time so he must be keen!

PETER Beardsley's superb goal against West Ham United had BBC commentator John Motson choking on his mike with excitement, but we don't turn a hair any more.

Peter is such a talented player that the rest of the lads almost expect him to do something special every time he sees the whites of the keeper's eyes.

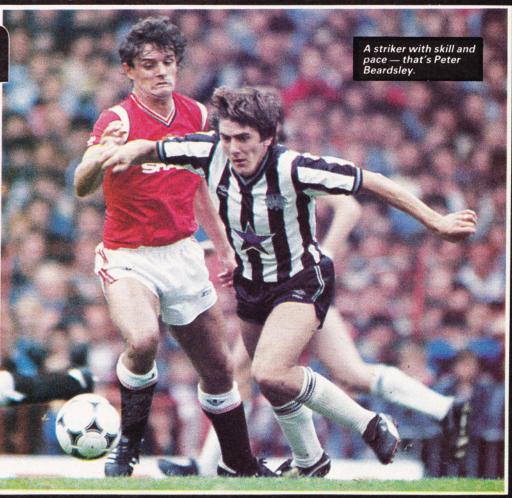

My team-mate has pace, skill, vision and a fierce shot.

If Peter does not win an England cap this season then there is no justice. I rate him among the best strikers in the First Division, and I enjoy being in the same side.

We share a common love — beating opponents. I reckon that is the way to wreck a defence — and a team's confidence. They get worried the moment you receive the ball; they don't know whether to back off or dive in; they start covering the man marking you, leaving gaps elsewhere for your teammates to exploit.

There's only one thing worse for a defender than a player with pace and that's a skilful player with pace.

Peter Beardsley scares them to death!

"I've got the heart and lungs for endurance running and was always first home. But for the past few years I've been getting beaten," he admits.

He is also honest enough to own up to the fact that the imminent return to first team duty of Glenn Hoddle and Ossie Ardiles has also affected his game.

My place is under threat once again, and that's why I want to be much more consistent. I'm the first to realise that at the moment I'm blowing hot and cold.

I don't feel, however, that it's entirely my

"When the team is playing good football I've been confident and felt OK. But against sides who want to kick us up in the air my game goes to pieces.

MOTORWAY traffic jam make Spurs late for their game at Birmingham and after changing on the coach they rush straight on to the field to kick-off four minutes behind time. They win 1-0 with a goal by Steve Archibald. Liverpool move into second place behind Manchester United by winning 1-0 at QPR — Rangers' first home defeat since losing to Chelsea nearly ten months earlier. After seven defeats in a row, Notts County hold Stoke to a 1-1 draw. In Scotland disgruntled Rangers supporters make their feeling's clear following their fifth defeat in nine Premier Division games 2-1 at home to Motherwell.

IN AN action-packed game at Leeds, Spurs goalkeeper Barry Daines is stretchered off and centre-half Paul Miller gets his marching orders, but the Londoners still manage a 2-1 victory with Glenn Hoddle in goal. There is a tough Merseyside derby at Anfield, where Everton force a 2-2 draw with Andy King getting their equaliser. Luton regain the lead in Division Two with a 2-1 win at West Ham. Geoff Hurst is confirmed as Chelsea's new manager and appoints Bobby Gould as his assistant. Burnley, at the bottom of the Second Division, are the only Football League side without a victory this season. In the Scottish Premier Division Celtic suffer their first defeat of the season, losing 1-0 at Morton with Bobby Thomson the scorer.

LEAGUE leaders early in the season, Carlisle seem determined not to be written-off. Although they have slipped down the First Division they beat Derby County 3-0, scoring twice in four minutes. Middlesbrough and Coventry give the fans their money's worth with a 4-4 draw at Ayresome Park, a point which sends Middlesbrough up to fifth place in the First Division which is headed by Liverpool and Manchester City. Manchester United go four points clear at the top of the Second Division with a 3-0 victory at Blackpool. Arsenal slump to the bottom of the First Division after a 2-0 defeat at Spurs. After eight games Rangers remain the only unbeaten side in the Scottish First Division but are only one point ahead of Celtic.

SHOOT fires the questions you've been dying

We are told that Italian football-is very different from the English League. Is this true?

HATELEY: Well, let's just say it's a lot different. But it hasn't taken as long as I thought it would to adapt. Hard work is the reason for that — I'm sure it's the reason I have settled so quickly. I have never been worked so hard in my life before. One thing I have discovered, you don't get as much aggression in the games out here. You get penalised straight away if it gets too physical. In that respect, English football is tougher.

wilkins: The main difference is the technique — the skill factor is exceptionally high. But against that, they lack the qualities of British players in matters such as fight and determination. But I would say you have time to hit better passes and do better things with the ball over here.

ERICE

Do you enjoy the electric atmosphere at Italian matches?

HATELEY: There is simply nothing like it back home, even at the big First Division clubs. The atmosphere at our first match of the season, against Zico's side, Udinese, in the San Siro stadium, was fantastic. It was certainly a lot louder than anything in England.

wilkins: The atmosphere is probably better here because the fans are more fanatical than in England. But the crowds here need to be stimulated. At Manchester United, I played with the best crowd in Britain and they stimulated you. Over here, you have to do something good to get them going.

HATELEY: I can't think of anything I miss about the game in England. Playing against the top players in the world like Zico, Socrates, Brady and Platini — you couldn't ask for anything more than that. I suppose you could say I miss my friends at home. Socially, it's a bit difficult at the moment, what with not speaking the language and having to stay in the hotels. But there is nothing I pine for very much.

We're told you're living like kings?

HATELEY: At Coventry, I was with a club which didn't have any sort of ambition. At Portsmouth, I was in Division Two. Now I'm with a massive club, one of the best in the world. That means the players are treated in the best way possible. My life has changed so much since I came here.

WILKINS: I want to live a normal family life. Hotels are OK, but not for any period of time. You tend to over eat in them because you get bored. I'm hoping to get a home near one of the famous lakes North of Milan. If we had a place there, it would be perfect because the club's training ground would be only ten minutes away by car.

Will your moves affect your England careers?

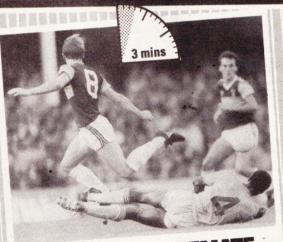

HATELEY: I hope it will earn me a regular place in Bobby Robson's side. Everyone says 'You're only 22, you have plenty of time to wait'. But I'm impatient - I want to get into the side for the next match. Doing well out here can only help my England chances. I feel much better already as a player - I'm sharper, quicker and all round more aware of what I have to do.

WILKINS: I sincerely hope not and I don't believe it will if I keep up my form. Whether you are in Manchester or Milan, as long as you are playing well enough to deserve a place you'll play for England.

What are the chances of you becoming better players in Italy?

HATELEY: I believe I've already improved. The Swedish coach, Nils Liedholm, has concentrated on my work in the penalty-area - that's where he wants me to be at my most effective. He has said it's not necessary to worry about working outside the area — it's inside that he wants me to be successful.

WILKINS: It is vital to me to become a better player and I think playing here can help me achieve that. My aim is to be a better player every time I go back to join up with the England squad. Everyone can still learn things about their job and I'm no exception.

EDWARD Tan Yong Jin, writes from Batu Pahat, Johor, West Malaysia. Fabulous! No other word can describe the New SHOOT.

But why can't your overseas readers join in the competitions?" I've received many similar letters. Here's an official reply from our Competitions Manager "Mainly the cost involved. Most competitions include a trip to London, or a soccer school in England. The cost of flying in a prize winner from abroad would be astronomical.

"Also the postage of prizes to an overseas country, would cost more than the actual prize!"

There you are Edward. I only wish we could afford to extend competitions to SHOOT readers everywhere. Unfortunately as you will now appreciate it just isn't possible.

Y thanks to all at Liverpool for making me so welcome when I and adidas executive Colin Wooldridge presented the First Division Golden Shoe Award to lan Rush, before the recent Sheffield Wednesday game.

I sat behind Labour's Deputy eader Mr. Roy Hattersley in the directors box and at times had difficulty following the game because he kept leaping out of his seat.

The distinguished gentleman is a devoted Sheffield Wednesday fan and was in a buoyant mood after seeing his team win 2-0.

When asked how he felt about the result in the lounge afterwards, Mr. Hattersley gave a diplomatic reply.

A great game ... and a most pleasant sporting surprise.

"I was just coming to terms with having to fill Trevor's shirt, now you've reminded me about Geoff Hurst — and I hadn't given him a thought

"Mind you, it might explain why I'm playing so well," said Alan, recovering his composure.

"That shirt knows how to play on its own!

Gates was again included in the squad for the next World Cup clash with Switzerland but injury forced him to withdraw and when he was subsequently named in the 'B' squad to face Spain he pulled out because of the imminent birth of his first child.

I often wonder if that had anything to do with the fact that I was never again selected," he says.

But now Gates has emerged once more as a genuine cap contender after a whirlwind start to the new season. "Bobby Robson knows my game inside out from his time at Ipswich. No one knows more about me than he does," says Gates. "But I must admit I have my doubts as to whether he will pick me.

Liverpool's slump

Once again Liverpool have been written off as Championship contenders. Do you think their reign is over this time?

ANDREW RUSSON BRANSTON, LINCS

People have been saying this for the last ten years, but to suggest they won't be among the challengers is ludicrous. I get the feeling they might not win the League this time, but remember that ve come storming back after 'lendthe title to Villa and Forest in recent years. I hope for football's sake that they don't win the Championship again. I'll just settle for the European Cup!

Don't forget Gary

Everyone seems to think it's either Woodcock and Mariner or Hateley and Francis for England. But have they all the sharpest forgotten Gary Lineker English striker around

ANDREW PRATT LEICESTER.

I'd certainly like to see him get more of a chance than the brief appearance he had as sub against Scotland last season. For the last two years I've been raving about Lineker, and was surprised both Liverpool and United went for someone else during the summer. Perhaps Leicester want too much money for him, because I know the top clubs have made a gentleman's agreement not to pay more than £750,000 for any player. With all due respect to Leicester, I'd love to see Lineker in a really good team — he'd be the League's top scorer bar none.

We want goals!

I can't understand how managers like Jack Charlton and Howard Kendall can complain after watching their teams score five away from home. So what if they conceded a few in the process? Surely it's goals the fans want to see - not brilliant defensive play

I agree with your sentiments, but I can also understand why Jack and Howard were upset because unless you've got a good defence you'll never win anything. Just look at Brazil in the last World Cup. They were brilliant in attack but didn't have a clue at the back and went out to Italy. Above all else the fan wants to see his team win - preferably 5-0, but 1-0 will do. We all love to see a mountain of goals scored — but they don't necessarily guarantee a great game. I can remember a number of magnificent 0-0 draws.

Cheers Charlie!

Well done Charlie Nicholas for proving to a great many critics — yourself included — that he didn't sign for the wrong club when he joined Arsenal.

MARK THORP, ROMFORD, ESSEX.

I didn't say he'd joined the wrong club. I said he'd have done better at Liverpool or Manchester United, and I still believe that. He's too good a player not to do well, but Arsenal signed him as a striker who'd just scored 50 goals in a season and have turned him into a midfield player. Although I must admit the Scotland international has turned in some remarkable performances for The Gunners in that position this season.

Why don't Southampton sack manager Lawrie McMenemy? He's been in charge at The Dell for more than ten years and in that time the team should have won a great many more trophies than they have

DAVID MORGAN, CAMBERLEY, SURREY.

Don't be ridiculous. Lawrie has put Southampton on the foot-ball map with very limited re-sources and has done brilliantly to keep them up near the top. He could quite easily have taken control of a more glamorous club but has remained loyal to Saints. Now Southampton must reciprocate, although it wouldn't surprise me to see them parting company before the end of the season.

Mackay's still magic

Have you any idea of the whereabouts of your old Spurs team-mate Dave Mackay and is he still involved in soccer?

WILLIAM SMILLIE, LINLITHGOW, W. LOTHIAN

Dave has been running a team out in Kuwait for the last five years — and very successfully. too. In fact, I keep hearing he wants to come home but the oil sheikh or whoever it is in charge out there keeps offering him more money to stay. I've seen him a few times in the last couple of years and he looks fitter than ever. Mind you, I don't suppose there's a great deal to do out in Kuwait other than train and play squash!

Falco's fans

I'm delighted to see that Mark Falco is starting to get the recognition he de-serves. It's not so long ago that he was getting a lot of stick from the Spurs fans. PAUL BENNETT,

PARKLANDS, NORTHAMPTON.

Having spent nine years at White Hart Lane, I know just how difficult the Tottenham fans are to please. Luckily, they never had a go at me but I remember poor old Terry Venables took some terrible hammer from them. I'm pleased to see Falco's finally winning them over. He's a strong, honest lad who never hides. But he mustn't lose confidence when the inevitable barren run comes. Even I lost form once — for five minutes!

Sweeper 'Keepers

GALKEEPERS often double up as sweepers these days.
They are encouraged to come out of the area to cover for defenders who have pushed forward to put pressure on opponents.

opponents.
Until recently 'keepers rarely strayed out of the penalty-area. Now you often see them rush out to clear their lines.

It's vital that 'keepers don't attempt any fancy footwork. The big boot is the golden rule under these circumstances.

Kick the ball as far away as possible, or try to find touch. Don't mess around trying to be clever.

More often than not 'keepers are able to read the situation and get to the ball before an opponent, but sometimes they make mistakes.

Bruce Grobbelaar (below), dropped a clanger against Sheffield Wednesday recently.

The ball was played through the middle, past the Liverpool back-four. Bruce raced out of his goal and instead of booting clear tried to slip a delicate pass to a team-mate.

Unfortunately, Bruce
miskicked and in raced Imre Varadi to intercept and slip the ball into an empty net from 30 vards.

The Liverpool 'keeper has often been criticised for "playing to the crowd".

While it's great to have characters like Bruce in the game, I wouldn't advise any youngster to copy his style.

Concentrate on your basic goalkeeping skills and leave the clowning to experts like Bruce.

lain Sharp of Gerrard Road, Whitley Bay, Tyne and Wear asks: "What are the best foods to eat before a game?"

IT'S better to eat too little than too much, lain.

I used to have a good meal on a Friday night and then just toast, jam or honey, tea with sugar three hours before kick-off.

Some players have peaches and cornflakes before games. Others just an omelette. Steak used to be favourite but the experts say that red meat takes 24 hours to digest and is bad for you. Better to have fish or chicken. Don't eat chips, rolls or potatoes.

The West Ham and England lads have a bar of chocolate before games to give them energy.

NEWS FROM TONY ROCHE

ICHEL PLATINI received IVI shock when Juventus coach Trapattoni suggested his solution to the French wizard's sudden loss of form... he dropped him!

As Juventus took on Como, Platini stayed at home, admitting: "I was surprised, but I believe the decision a good one. I have not had a holiday, nor rest, because of my involvement with France in the European Championship. But I will bounce back."

He did! With a one-week break under his belt, Platini played against Atalanta and scored twice in a 5-1

They tell me...

- Real Madrid's angry players, fed up being labelled greedy because of their role in the recent players' strike, donated their £1,200 bonus per man for beating Wacker Innsbruck in the UEFA Cup to charity.
- Chile have appointed Cobreloa manager Vicente Cantatore as national team coach for their World Cup eliminators against Uruguay and Ecuador.
- Arpi Filho, the referee appointed for Liverpool's World Club Championship match against Independiente of Argentina in Tokyo, has been banned by the Brazilian F.A. for inciting a climate of violence during a League game between Palmeiras and Sao Paulo.
- Franz Beckenbauer (below), manager of West Germany, wants the Bundesliga reduced from 18 clubs to 14 in order "to eliminate the less interesting games and promote a better standard of football."

■ The 1985 European Cup Final will be played in Brussels on May 29 and the Cup-Winners' Cup Final in Rotterdam on May 15.

OHN TOSHACK has Made a dazzling start to his new career as manager of Sporting Lisbon.

The former Swansea boss has shaken off the Vetch Field blues and his disappointment at not getting the nod from Liverpool to succeed Bob Paislev.

Lisbon have made a tremendous start, top the table and have their fans dreaming of the title after a 6-2 win at Salgueros.

Domination

Toshack is quietly reshaping Lisbon and has set them on the road to ending the recent Benfica/FC Porto domination of Portuguese football.

Toshack's strike force is led by Manuel Fernandez, currently top scorer in Portugal, but he wants a quality striker to partner him... and has been watching Garth Crooks of Spurs!

Crooks' return to Spurs' first team could up the asking price, but I'm told that Toshack believes Fernandez and Crooks would really buzz and is prepared to improve the offer he made last month.

Penarol

FURTHER problems for Penarol of Uruguay. They now face closure from Pluna, Uruguay's national airline! They are claiming for non-payment of 25,000 dollars worth of air fares. That will be added to the 220,000 dollars the club owe to other debtors.

LUDO COECK, the Inter Milan player currently on loan to Ascoli, is back in his native Belgium for make-or-break treatment to an ankle injury that threatens to end his career.

MARK McGHEE, Hamburg's close-season signing from Aber-deen, escaped the axe by 11 minutes in the recent Bundesliga

Having failed to score in his new club's first four games,

McGhee (left) saw the ominous sign of a sub warming up as Karlsruher held on to a 1-0 lead in game number five.

But it was McGhee who saved the day — and a point — with a 79th minute equaliser, and went on to sink Southampton in the UEFA Cup with a last-minute goal!

BRITAIN IN EUROPE - ROUND TWO

O BRITISH player today is better qualified to comment on playing Europe than Ray Clemence.

He's in his 16th year of campaigning for honours with Liverpool and now Spurs — and has three European Cup and three UEFA Cup winner's medals to his credit.

Of the 15 British clubs who qualified for Europe this season, ten have won through to

EUROPEAN CUP

LIVERPOOL v BENFICA

This will be the third time in six years my old club have met the Portuguese Champions. I played against them in my last season at Anfield and we won comfortably with a 6-2 aggregate. Trouble with Benfica is that they have talented individuals but poor team-work. Liverpool should have no trouble giving them the k.o. In fact I believe the Reds will reach the Final again if they can avoid Ray casts an experienced eye over each the Second Round. Second Round team to assess how many will survive — and gives a thumbs up or down!

CUP-WINNERS' CUP

ROMA v WREXHAM

A dream tie for Bobby Roberts' team. A big gate against a star-studded Italian glamour side will give the club's finances the boost they need. Having knocked out last season's losing Cup-Winners' Cup Finalists, Porto, it's too much to expect a victory over the losing European Cup Finalists. If it happens, it'll be a miracle!

shutting up shop. It's going to be tight, but I'll have my fingers crossed The Blues make it to the last eight.

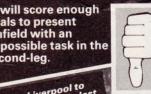

Everton (dark shorts) struggled to break down UCD's massed defence in the last round.

Juventus, their strongest challengers PANATHINAIKOS V LINFIELD

If the draw had been reversed the Irishmen would have stood a chance. But I know from experience how geed-up Greek sides are by fans when they start a tie on their home ground. The Greeks losing Finalists in 1971

- will score enough goals to present Linfield with an impossible task in the second-leg.

CELTIC v RAPID VIENNA

If Rapid Vienna are as strong as Austria Vienna, the side that gave Spurs such a tough time in last season's UEFA Cup, the Parkhead lads are in for a hard battle. Celtic's biggest asset will be their fanatical crowd. Most foreign sides just aren't used to playing in front of such tremendous home support. So come on you Celts, you can shout your team through!

INTER-BRATISLAVA v EVERTON

Everton's tactic must be to obtain a good away result and rely on getting goals at Goodison. But they must overcome their problem of scoring against defensive sides — and Czechs are great at

UEFA CUP

BRUGES v SPURS

This pairing really brought back happy memories for me. With Liverpool I played against the Belgians in the 1975-76 Final of this competition, then again in the 1978 European Cup Final, and we won both times. We'll be looking for a "respectable" result in Bruges, with one goal at least to bring back to White Hart Lane. And we'd like our fans to leave a good impression!

PSV EINDHOVEN v MAN. UNITED

My opposite number at United, Gary Bailey, is in for a busy time against the Dutchmen who, like United, play all-out attacking football. I predict the fans are going to see a lot of goals over the two legs, with United getting the bigger share. The Reds will go through at Old Trafford.

QPR v PARTIZAN BELGRADE

I've never played against Partizan, but Belgrade's other club, Red Star, were too strong for Liverpool in 1973. Alan Mullery's men must tighten up a leaky defence to ensure the Yugoslavs don't score at Highbury. And if they can take a couple of goals to Belgrade and defend them they'll pass a really stern test of Jock Wallace's lads couldn't have been handed a tougher draw. Inter have two of the Liam Brady, the former Arsenal midfield genius, and Karl-Heinz Rummenigge, the West German ace. I've played against Karl when he was with Bayern Munich and the national team, and he's like a jack-in-the-box capable of popping up in the most unusual places to score. I know I'll risk losing any Scots fans I have, but I'm

LASK LINZ V DUNDEE UNITED

The fact that, like most people, I've never heard of this Austrian club indicates they haven't much of a pedigree. United shouldn't underestimate them, though, but the Scots club must be confident through the success they've had in recent years. I'm convinced it's United for the Third Round.

THE FANS I LOVE AND HATE

There's much, much MORE of everything in SHOOT — the magazine that brings the game alive!

Between them the two great clubs have enough silver to warrant Securicor's presence and many now believe that the famous security firm would have to fend off a fierce assault on the vault by London giants Arsenal and Spurs.

IVERPOOL, League Champions and Milk Cup holders, as well as European Champions, have made a modest start by their own awesome standards.

Everton, winners of the F.A. Cup and Charity Shield, are rocketing up the table and scoring more freely than last season.

And both have marched into the Second Round of their respective European competitions, the Champions', and Cup-Winners' Cups.

But there's an ever-growing roar from way down South. The North London clubs both former winners of the elusive 'double' --- are not only sustaining their excellent form but entertaining into the

Our star-writer Rush, battling to recover from a knee injury and get into the squad for Saturday, said: "Arsenal and Spurs are two excellent teams. I admire their style and their

"If we don't win it again then you have to look to Manchester United and our neighbours, Everton.

I don't underestimate the London clubs — far from it. They have quality players throughout both sides. But it's a long, hard season and Liverpool have more experience than the rest put

We know how to handle mini-slumps, transitional periods, such as right now,

"United have a marvellous squad and fanatical fans. They are on the very edge of the breakthrough. And Everton? They've overcome their biggest problem, winning their first major trophy since 1970. Now that's out of the way they are very dangerous."

Ratcliffe agreed: "You have to reckon on the clubs up this way being out in front at the end. I don't see Spurs as Champions because they tend to be inconsistent. They are a
